

I had no idea when I joined my first FTC team back in 2018 I would be walking on the stepping stones to years of fun, strong relationships, valuable lessons and skill sets. Making the switch to FRC shortly after would be a big jump in intensity and would make my shortcomings much more apparent at the beginning of the season. This was an excellent way for me to define my best attributes as well as work on where I may have been lacking. By the end of the season, I had a solid definition of my self and, with plenty of help from my teammates, not only did we all grow as individuals, but our combined effort put on strong competition. Nothing has made me more proud.
